Is That a Smile on My Dog's Face?

Psychic readers are helping thousands of people communicate with their pets.

San Jose, CA – August 8, 2007 – Psychic Readers are increasingly being called upon to help owners communicate with their pets. In some cases it is when a pet is having some type of problem, be it running away, digging, going to the bathroom in the house, etc. But according to Susan Page, president and founder of Looking Beyond, Inc., many people want to talk to their pets after they have moved on too.

“Pets are beings in bodies, we embrace them and in many instances they are like our children,” said Page. “When they move on it can be very painful and many people are turning to psychics to find out if their beloved pets are ok on the other side. It is amazing to hear different things about your pet and people are curious about it.”

It is a booming industry according to Page, who's Looking Beyond has 20 master psychics who offer readings 7 days a week. Many of her clients call with questions about relationships, finances and careers, but she is seeing an increasing number of calls from people wanting to talk about their pets.

“One woman lost her pet in a traumatic way and was very troubled by it. She didn't initially call to talk about her pet, but during her general reading, the reader felt her pet's energy and mentioned it. The caller had suffered a great deal of pain and remorse about her pet's death. The reader told her many things she never could have known. These things made the woman smile as she remembered the good times with her pet and now knows her pet is ok.”

“Our readers have helped many people solve issues they have been having with troubled pets who are living, as well,” said Page. “They can't communicate for themselves, but our readers read their energy and can interpret what they want to communicate to their owners.”
